ABOUT MIRANILA

Before there was Quezon City there was MiraNila. Built in 1929 by the Benitez family, the mansion preceded by ten years the creation of what President Manuel L. Quezon hoped would be the Philippine capital. MiraNila was recognized as a cultural heritage site by the National Historical Commission in 2011. The museum is open to the public by appointment.

Today, MiraNila provides an elegant setting to celebrate the past with all the modern amenities presented by its concept partners: The Gallery MiraNila by Blue Leaf (an events space); nearby accommodations at The Henry Suites (with seven spacious rooms) and al fresco dining by Bizu set amidst the tranquil gardens of MiraNila.

MIRANILA was built on what was the highest point in the old town of San Juan del Monte. In the 1930s when a fire broke out in Intramuros, Helena Z Benitez, the young daughter of the house, saw the conflagration from the tower and exclaimed "Mira a Manila" which gave the house its iconic name
